DIGGS HOUSEDescription

The DIGGS HOUSE is a two storey frame house dating from the late nineteenth century. With its west facade closely oriented to the road, a steep gable punctuates the roof, accenting the principal entrance centered below in the first storey. Two 2/2 windows are on either side of the entrance and four similar windows are evenly spaced in the second storey. A one-storey hipped-roof porch shelters the principal front. A two storey kitchen wing extends one long bay behind the south end. The gabled roofs rise above wide eave and rake overhangs, the latter with bold eave returns.

The interior of this house was not inspected.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Significance

Dating from the late nineteenth century, the DIGGS HOUSE is a traditional house, the steep gable in the front roof slope placing this house in the Gothic-revival style.

Nellie Jones Diggs now has sole possession of the small house although at various times numerous relatives have shared interest in the property. Mrs. Diggs inherited these rights from her father Thomas H. Jones.¹

On April 7, 1911 Stewart H. Brown and wife conveyed the lot with buildings to Mrs. Diggs' parents Thomas H. and Ella B. Jones for $1650.² Brown, in turn, was deeded this property for $225 by the Green Spring Methodist Church in 1903.³ The church and its property had been presented to the Black residents by Charles Stewart Morton in 1872.⁴
